     1. Current annual economic facts & figures (statistics) of the region
     2. Concluding remarks on the regional (and other related) tourism strategies and development guidelines
     3. Overall description of the tourism industry

   • Common starting points, principles and guidelines

   • Regional special characteristics

   • Building blocks for a common ground for the Action Plan of Barents Tourism Public–Private Partnership
Current Statistics

- Diverse regions, big gaps – Fairly similar statistical data and joint vocabulary available

- According to the statistics, we have advanced regions working together for tourism development and higher tourism volumes

- Significant seasonal changes, rather low overall utilization rates

- In overall, Barents tourism deals with millions of tourist arrivals, billions of euros and many thousand business units and tens of thousands of employees!
  - Globally significant figures
  - Global growth potential
Strategies and Development Guidelines

- Many strategies that frame regional tourism development
  - International
  - National
  - Regional
  - Local

- In overall, strategic planning is on good level, active role of the public sector (?), project-based development

- Public–Private Partnerships are on good / moderate level
  - An obvious development focus to build on strengths!
Describing the Tourism Industry

- Versatile area for tourism activities
- Public–Private relationships, networking and complexity
- Globally unknown destination (vs. its member regions), global potential
- Price vs. quality, volume vs. value
What is Common to Us?

Common starting points, principles and guidelines

* Rather commensurable, similar view of the tourism industry

* Development of tourism entrepreneurship (but the starting points differ), versatile types of entrepreneurship

* Internationalization of tourism

* To increase the utilization of Research & Development knowledge

* Accessibility

* To enhance technological development & communication networks

* Natural resources and amenities

* € as a challenge – to join forces
How We Differ?

Regional Special Characteristics

Differences in availability and use of critical mass (People!)

The level and/or development resources of tourism infrastructure

Different developmental phases of regions/destinations, also organizing

Government driven vs. Business driven vs. Jointly driven?

Top-down vs. bottom-up?

Marketing and international tourism expertise
Building Blocks for the Action Plan

Building blocks for a common ground for the Action Plan of Barents Tourism Public–Private Partnership

The momentum (e.g. EU, Barents area member states, ongoing projects, international tourism trends) – the crossroads

A strong belief in the destination focus in development and multiple positive impacts of tourism – and Barents as a cross-border tourism destination (vs. e.g. Adriatic Sea, Balkan, Baltic Sea, The Alps, ...)

To increase the status and understanding of tourism, but also to enhance inter-sectoral business and regional development

Multi-cultural, poly-vocal and sustainable development work – diversity as a strength

Innovative product development (safety + service quality level + foresight + experience economy), differentiation

Instead of simply direct unification – probably more “tools for all”?
Thank you
